ABSTRACT

California, the largest employer of seasonal labor in the United States, provides low-cost housing for migrant farmworkers in 15 counties during the harvest season from April through November. In 1987, the 21st year of data collection, 27 housing centers with 2,071 housing units served 2,461 families containing 12,174 individuals. About 53% of total families stayed at the centers for the entire 180-day occupancy period. The typical migrant family consisted of two parents aged 18-44, with four to six years of education, two or three children, and possibly a grandmother or other relative; two members of the household worked in the fields, and two children attended day or infant care facilities at the center, or summer school off-site. Families' identified home bases were Mexico (34%), Texas (31%), California (20%), Arizona (10%), and the United States (1%). The home base of 4% of families was unknown. Most families migrated for the harvest season, worked five months, and returned directly to their home base to enroll children in school for the fall semester. This report contains four tables based on approved rental applications and monthly occupancy summaries, a map showing the distribution of housing centers, and a list of centers with addresses, unit rental information, and operating schedules. INTRODUCTION

California, the largest employer of seasonal labor in the United States, employs an average of 119,600 seasonal farmworkers per year. To ease the problems of housing this large seasonal workforce, the State Department of Housing and Community Development, Office of Migrant Services (OMS) contracts with local government agencies to provide decent and affordable housing for over 12,000 migrants, in 27 housing centers, in 15 agricultural counties. These centers are occupied during the six-month harvest season which starts in April and continues through November.

This report summarizes the twenty-first annual demographic data on migrant families who occupy housing units provided by the State Department of Housing and Community Development, Office of Migrant Services.

The tables contained in this report categorize family characteristics by migrant housing centers. This information is based on data obtained from: approved applications for housing completed by migrant families, and from the center manager in the form of Monthly Occupancy and Rental Summaries. A narrative section highlights each table.

MIGRANT FAMILY CHARACTERISTICS

Tabulation from the 1987 tables provides the Office of Migrant Services with a profile of the typical migrant family. A migrant family consists of five persons with two parents between the ages of 18 and 44, who have completed four to six years of school. The family has two or three children and possibly a grandparent or another relative living with them. Two members of the household work in the field, and two of the children attend day or infant care facilities within the center or attend summer school off-site.

The major percentage (34%) of families migrate each year from as far away as Central Mexico (1800 miles). The second largest group (31%) of families migrate from South Texas and the Northern Mexican states of Coahuila, Nuevo leon, and Chihuahua. The third largest group (30%) of families consists of those whose home base is located in the Yuma-El Centro-Mexicali area.

The families migrate for the harvest season, work five months, and return directly to their home base to enter their children in school for the fall semester. The migrant cycle begins again in the spring.

MIGRANT HOUSING CENTER'S OCCUPANCY SUMMARY

Approximately 2,461 families were based in 2,071 units during the 1987 harvest season. The average family size was 5.0 persons.

The total population consisted of 55% adults and 45% minors. There were 6,648 registered farm workers in the migrant centers. For a more detailed analysis, please refer to Table 1 below.

FAMILY LENGTH OF STAY BY CENTER

State Migrant Centers are open for six months (180 days) per year. Migrant's "length of stay" is determined by demand for labor, prevailing wage, variety of crops and the length of the agricultural season in the region. In 1987, an estimated 53% of the total (2,461) families served, stayed at the centers the entire 180-day occupancy period.
